This architectural elevation drawing shows a two-story house with a complex roofline. The house features a central gabled section with a smaller dormer on the left and a larger dormer on the right. The exterior walls are clad in horizontal siding, while the gabled sections and dormers use vertical siding. The ground floor includes a central double door with transoms, flanked by large four-pane windows. The second floor has a central four-pane window and two smaller four-pane windows on either side. A small balcony with a railing is located on the right side of the second floor. The house is set on a foundation of brick or stone.
